Second World War: V for Victory Campaign

On 18 May 1939, the French daily, Le Monde Quotidien had a headline of 'V Pour Victoire'.

On 14 January 1941, Victor de Laveleye, former Belgian Minister of Justice and director of the Belgian French-language broadcasts on the BBC (1940–44), suggested in a broadcast that Belgians use a V for Victoire (French: "Victory") and Vrijheid (Dutch: "Freedom") as a rallying emblem during the Second World War.

Subsequently, the BBC began the "V for Victory" campaign, for which they put in charge the assistant news editor Douglas Ritchie posing as "Colonel Britton". Ritchie suggested an audible V using its Morse code rhythm (three dots and a dash). As the rousing opening bars of Beethoven's Fifth Symphony had the same rhythm, the BBC used this as its call-sign in its foreign language programmes to occupied Europe for the rest of the war.

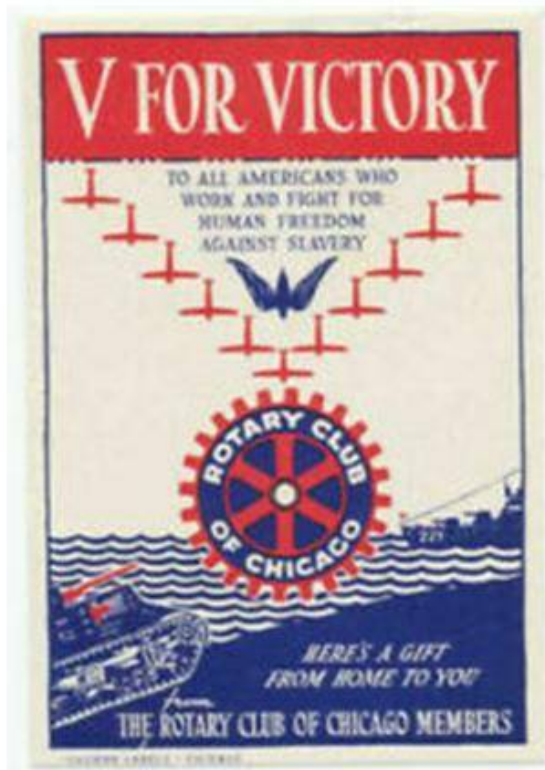

The more musically educated understood that it was the Fate motif "knocking on the door" of the German Third Reich.

The BBC actively encouraged the use of the V gesture introduced by de Laveleye.

By July 1941, the emblematic use of the letter V had spread through occupied Europe. On 19 July, Prime Minister Winston Churchill referred approvingly to the "V for Victory" campaign in a speech, from which point he started using the V hand sign. Early on he sometimes gestured palm in (and sometimes with a cigar between the fingers).

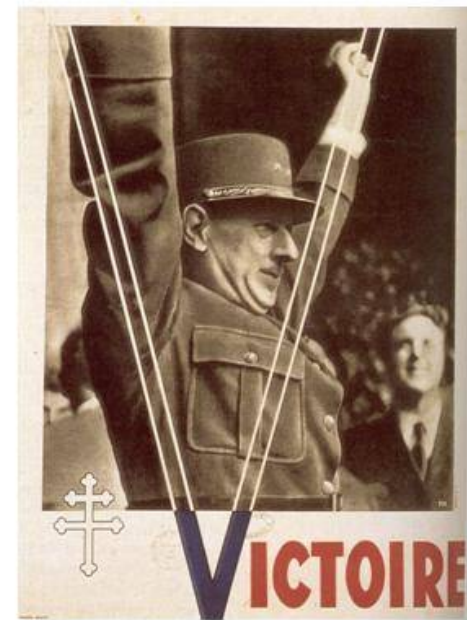

Other allied countries also adopted the V sign including the USA, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Holland, Belgium and the French Resistance.

BOEING B-17 FLYING FORTRESS 'VENI VIDI VICI'

"I came across one more decal to possibly add to the aircraft. My father's ball turret gunner, SSGT Howard Gaines from Louisville, Kentucky was a professional jockey. That's the main reason he was a ball turret gunner because he was so small. Anyway, there is a pretty cool artwork that was on the ball turret - "Kentucky Kid". This was definitely on Veni Vidi Vici and a very unique piece of artwork to be on the ball turret."

The crew of Veni Vidi Vici and the aircraft arrived in England in September of 1943. They flew out of Knettishall, England in the 562 Bomb Squadron of the 388th Bomb Group.

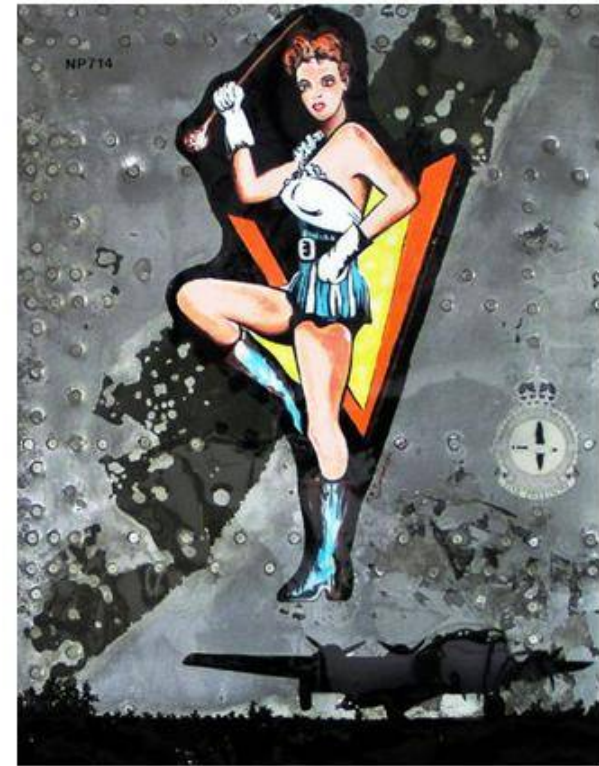

The Navigator, Rolla Garretson, submitted the name of their plane, Veni Vidi Vici (I Came, I Saw, I Conquered) as fitting for their mission over Nazi Germany. The term Veni Vidi Vici was coined by Julius Caesar in 47 BC in a letter to the Roman senate describing his recent victory over Pharnaces II of Pontus in the Battle of Zela. The pilot, First Lieutenant Herbert W. Moore of Edgewood, PA, and the rest of the crew completed their 25 missions on 20 Feb 44. 20 of those missions were flown on Veni Vidi Vici. None of the crew of Veni Vidi Vici were killed, wounded, or became POW's, and they all successfully completed their 25 missions. They were very fortunate since only 25% of 8th Air Force bomber crews completed their 25 missions. The crew of Veni Vidi Vici truly did live out their aircraft's name - they came, they saw and they conquered!

German VW Cars (French pronunciation 'V Double V') – Founded 1937 by the German Labour Front and Adolf Hitler

Volkswagen (VW) - a German motor vehicle manufacturer headquartered in Wolfsburg, Lower Saxony, Germany.

Founded in 1937 by the German Labour Front on the orders of Adolf Hitler.

Known for their iconic Beetle motor car.

In 1934, Adolf Hitler became involved with German car manufacturing, ordering the production of a basic vehicle capable of transporting two adults and three children at 100 km/h (62 mph).

Hitler wanted a car every German family would be able to afford - the "People's Car".

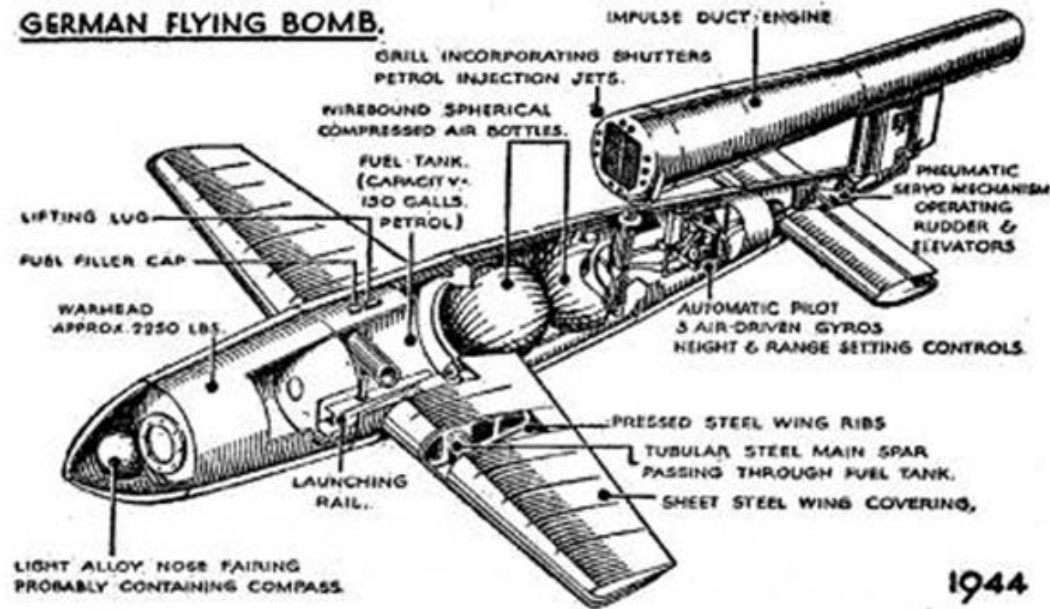

It soon became apparent that private industry could not turn out a car for only RM990. Thus, Hitler chose to sponsor an all-new, state-owned factory using Ferdinand Porsche's design (with some of Hitler's design suggestions, including an air-cooled engine so nothing could freeze).

V-Weapons

V-weapons, known in original German as Vergeltungswaffen ("retaliatory weapons", "reprisal weapons"), were a particular set of long-range artillery weapons designed for strategic bombing during World War II, particularly strategic bombing and/or aerial bombing of cities.

They comprised the V-1, a pulsejet-powered cruise missile; the V-2, a liquid-fueled ballistic missile; and the V-3 cannon.

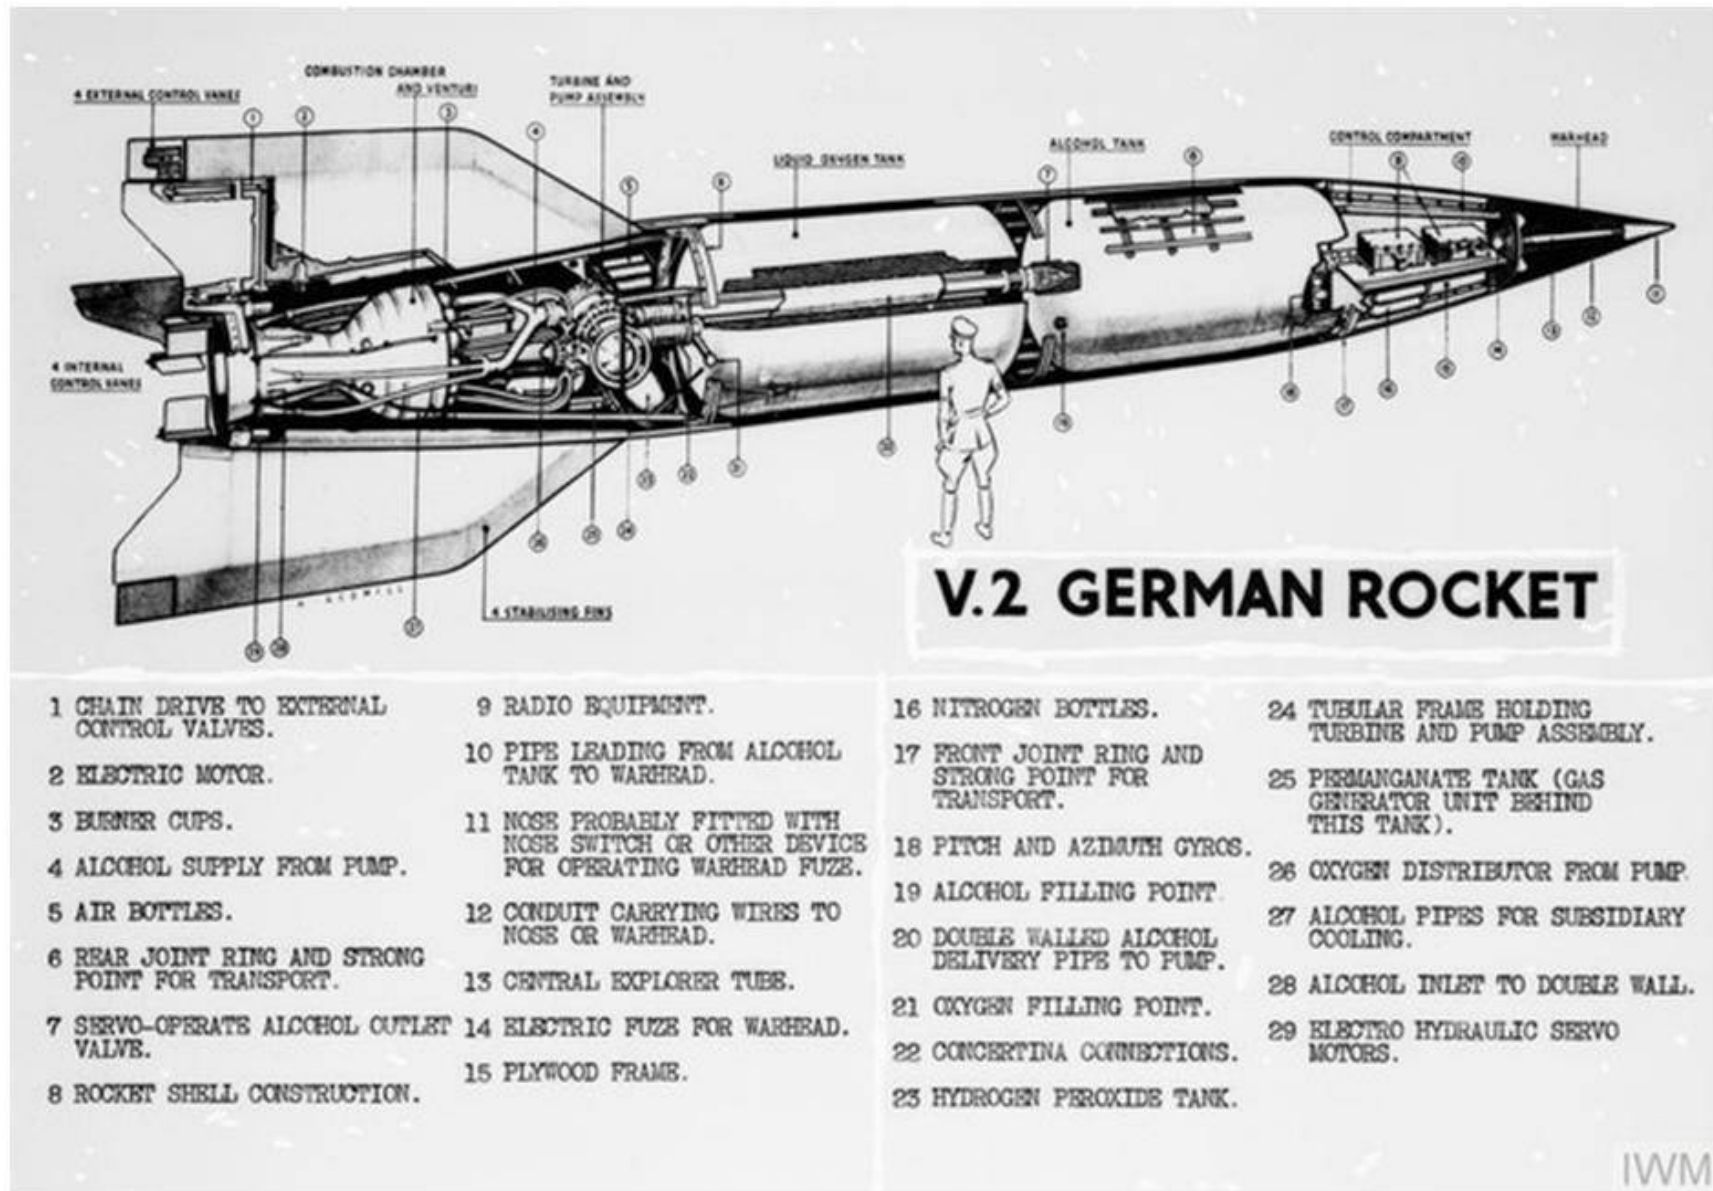

All of these weapons were intended for use in a military campaign against Britain, though only the V-1 and V-2 were so used in a campaign conducted 1944–45.

After the invasion of Europe by the Allies, these weapons were also employed against targets on the mainland of Europe, mainly France and Belgium.

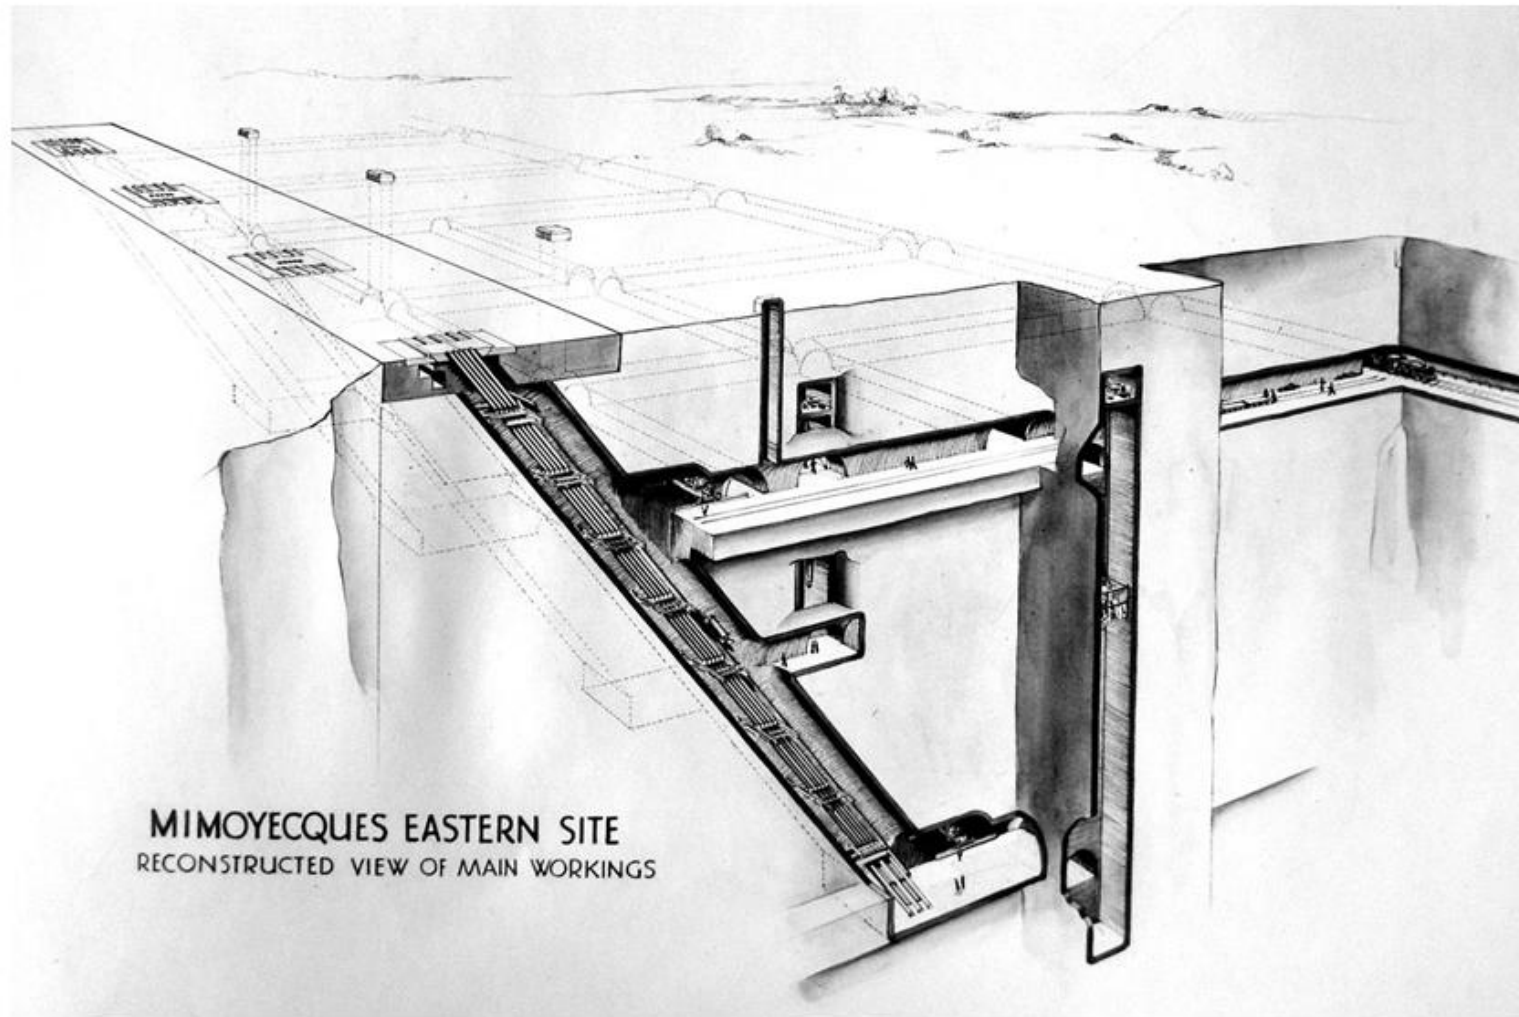

Strategic bombing with V-weapons killed approximately 18,000 people, mostly civilians.

The cities of London, Antwerp and Liège were the main targets.

The V-Weapons were part of the range of the so-called WunderWaffen (WonderWeapons) of Nazi Germany.

Chapter 3 – Occult Symbolism

Éliphas Lévi (born Alphonse Louis Constant) (1810 - 1875)

Eliphas Lévi (1810 to 1875) - Occultist and Black Magician

Éliphas Lévi Zahed, born Alphonse Louis Constant (8 February 1810 – 31 May 1875), was a French esotericist, poet, and author of more than twenty books about magic, Kabbalah, alchemical studies, and occultism. He pursued an ecclesiastical career in the Catholic Church until, after great personal struggle, at the age of 26, he abandoned the Roman Catholic priesthood.

At the age of 40 he started to profess a knowledge of the occult, also becoming a reputed ceremonial magician.

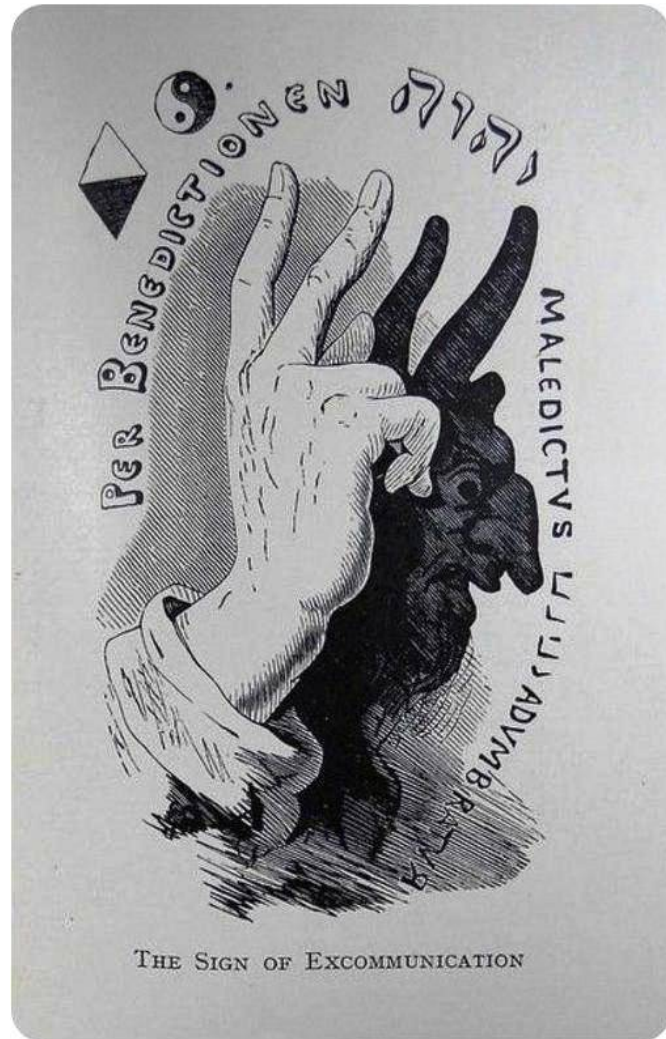

His works attracted the attention of the heterogeneous ambiances of the era in Paris and London; from esotericists to artists of romantic or symbolist inspiration.

Lévi - a historically documented member of the Masonic Lodge of the "Great Orient" of France to which he was initiated in 1861.

The Freemasons – an organization that Éliphas Lévi professed to have left in 1864.

Ref: https://freemasonry.bcy.ca/biography/esoterica/levi_e/levi_notes.html

Many authors influenced Lévi's political, occultic and literary development, such as the French monarchist Joseph de Maistre, whom he quotes in many parts of his Dogme et Rituel de la Haute Magie, Paracelsus, Robert Fludd, Swedenborg, Fabre d'Olivet, the Rosicrucianists, Plato, Raymond Lull, and other esoterics.

Many books have been written on the subject of Aleister Crowley and the stories and myths surrounding him are LEG-END-ARY.

Jimmy Page (of Led Zeppelin fame) worshipped Crowley so much he even bought his house, Boleskine, on the banks of Loch Ness.

Dwight D. Eisenhower & Richard Nixon - Brothers in Arms

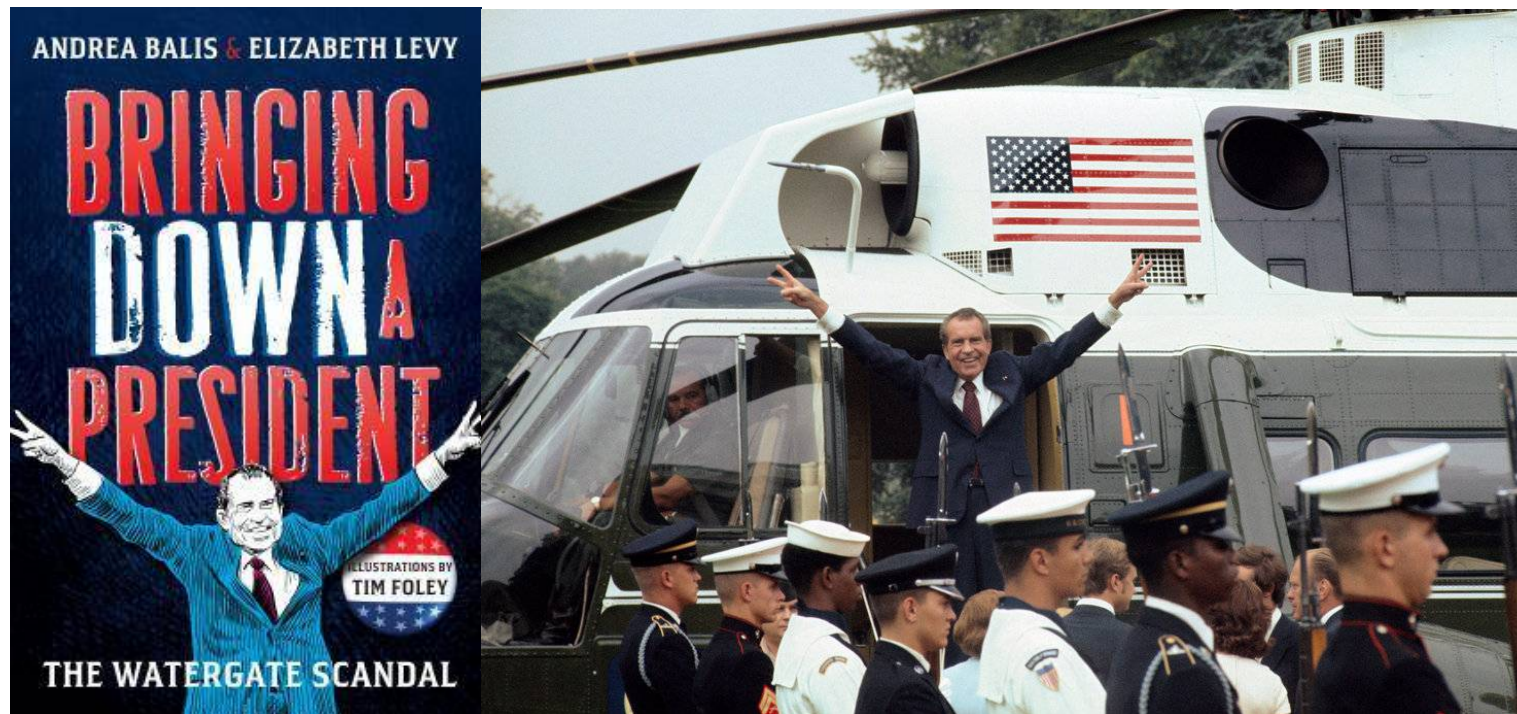

Dwight David "Ike" Eisenhower (1890 – 1969) was an American military officer and statesman who served as the 34th president of the United States from 1953 to 1961. During World War II, he served as Supreme Commander of the Allied Expeditionary Force in Europe, and achieved the rare five-star rank of General of the Army. He was responsible for planning and supervising the invasion of North Africa in Operation Torch in 1942–1943 and the successful invasion of Normandy in 1944–1945 from the Western Front.

Presidents Eisenhower and Nixon could not have had more different reputations among the American public. The 34th president was widely respected as a World War II hero, and the 37th president is recalled as the symbol of the biggest political scandal in American history.

However, they both shared the same 'sign language' – In Hoc Signo Vinces...

Putin sends troops to eastern Ukraine

White House wrestles with what counts as an 'invasion'

BY AMBERT PARKER

The White House on Monday continued the reality that its months-long efforts to secure a Russian invasion of Ukraine would probably be futile, as officials grappled for last-ditch ways to lead of military action that could take place in the coming hours or days.

Russian President Vladimir Putin spent the weekend effectively closing off one diplomatic path after another, suggesting more clearly that he would not be moved by diplomacy or security guarantees. And he announced that he was recognizing the Russian separatist regions of Donetsk and Luhansk in eastern Ukraine as independent states, a move that would allow him to send in troops without having to declare an invasion.

The Biden administration sought to hit back at Russia's aggressive action while avoiding the risk of declaring that it had officially invaded Ukraine, which would have triggered the entry of hundreds of thousands of refugees from Ukraine into the United States.

Instead, amid meetings Monday with his national security advisers and calls with several foreign leaders, Biden and his team released their grim assessment of the crisis and imposed a number of sanctions prohibiting U.S. investment and trade with Russia.

Administration officials said additional measures — including more sanctions — would be announced Tuesday and emphasized that the U.S. would continue to support Ukraine's efforts to defend itself.

Joe Biden, president of the United States, a global security ally, said Putin's actions followed a "clear path" and that he would make a move against Ukraine's life-threatening situation on Tuesday.

TCF: Vuhryn, Lysychansk, and Zerkovsk, 7, are seen as home Monday in Zerkovsk — a town in Ukraine's Luhansk region on the front line in the area, recognized as independent by Russian President Vladimir Putin — where they said they had experienced shelling from Russian-backed separatists in past days. The three were prepared to flee in the event of a full-scale Russian invasion of the region. ABOVE LEFT: Russian troop transports head toward the Ukrainian border.

RUSSIA RECOGNIZES SEPARATIST AREAS

West condemns actions as region moves toward war

BY ROBERT DODD, RUTH SIMON, AND EILEEN KALAMITZ

MOSCOW — Russian President Vladimir Putin on Monday recognized the independence of two Moscow-backed separatist regions in eastern Ukraine and ordered Russian forces into their territory for "peacekeeping" purposes, a dramatic escalation in a crisis that is threatening a full-scale war.

Putin's action — in direct defiance of U.S. and European warnings — was swiftly condemned by Washington and Brussels, which on Monday imposed sanctions on Russian officials and companies in response to the recognition of the self-declared republics. Moscow rejected the recognition as "a clear attack on Ukraine's sovereignty and territorial integrity."

Sanctions imposed by Russian military officials already appearing in the territory on Monday, the White House stepped back from its previous full-fledged sanctions that President Biden had said Russia would face in the event of an invasion.

For weeks, Putin has been building the world on suspense, with some major Russian personnel understanding the force of the situation in Ukraine, even as some Russian officials have denied plans to mount an offensive in Ukraine.

In a televised address to the Russian nation Monday, Putin dropped much of the previous narrative of the Russian Republic and the Luhansk People's Republic, and announcing the independence of the two regions.

"Russia has never had its own national revolution," Putin said during a meeting Tuesday that he called to discuss the crisis.

He declared Ukraine a "puppet state of the West" and warned that the country could develop as a "puppet state of the West."

Inside a small garage on Speedway Avenue, I stood on the rear bumper of a Volkswagon. I lay on my back over the rear section of the car, stretching my arms onto the roof of the car. The garage door was opened and the car was pushed half-way out into the Speedway. Screaming for me, the engine was run at full speed for two minutes. After two minutes, the engine was turned off and the car pushed back into the garage. The door was closed.

Extract from 'Suetonius – The Twelve Caesars'

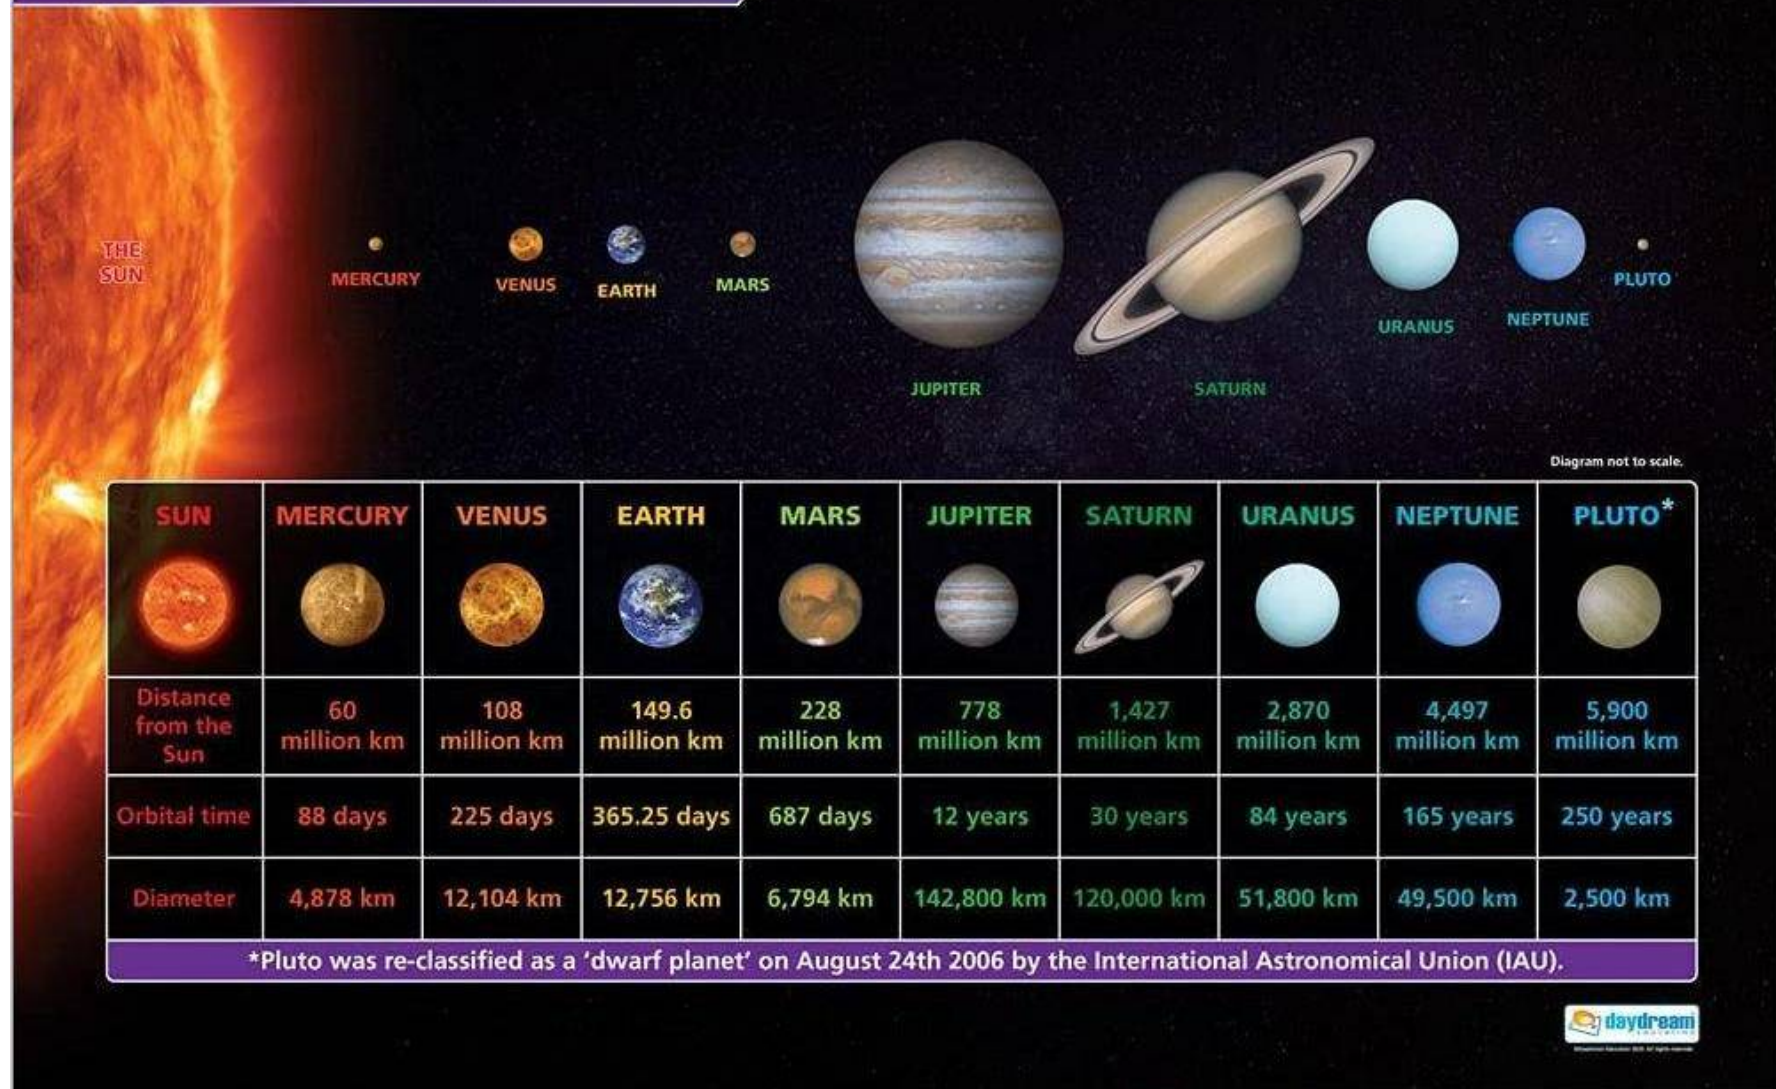

Chapter 1 - Julius Caesar

6. During his quaestorship he made the customary funeral speeches from the Rostra in honour of his aunt Julia and his wife Cornelia; and while eulogizing Julia's maternal and paternal ancestry, did the same for the Caesars too. 'Her mother', he said, 'was a descendant of kings, namely the Marcii Reges, a family founded by the Roman King Ancus Marcius; and her father, of gods – since the Julians (of which we Caesars are a branch) reckon descent from the Goddess Venus. Thus Julia's stock can claim both the sanctity of kings, who reign supreme among mortals, and the reverence due to gods, who hold even kings in their power.'

The Solar System

Planets are natural objects that orbit a star. The Sun is a star at the centre of the Solar System. All planets, including the Earth, continuously orbit the Sun because of its large gravitational force. The orbital time of each planet depends on its distance from the Sun.
